

Contact

Dr. Ignacio J. Diaz-Maroto | ignacio.diazmaroto@usc.es | +34 982 107 531

Title:	Towards sustainable development of rural landscapes
Organizers:	Dr. Ignacio J. Diaz-Maroto, Agroforestry Department University of Santiago de Compostela, Spain
Date:	Monday, 12 th March 2018
Time:	13:00 – 16:00
Location:	Berlin, Germany - Adlershof con.vent
Languages:	English
Costs:	30 € (Lunch included)

Participants

About 30 participants, open to all conference participants (registration required)

Thematic Outline

To achieve sustainable development of both the agroforestry landscapes as the silvopastoral landscapes, it is necessary to have a precise knowledge of the development process and dynamics of the landscape with a socioeconomic research approach of the policies to be carried out. Also, it must be included an appropriate assessment component for use in decision-making, in order to analyze how this framework could be developed to facilitate interdisciplinary research applied to the development processes of the landscape, such as the interaction between landscape and the rural population.

The workshop offers the opportunity to establish a scientific basis for proper assessment of the different components of these landscapes for use in decision-making. In this regard, it is proposed to facilitate discussion investigating the current status of the valuation of landscape services by analyzing the quality of existing indicators.

Among the possibilities to communicate the results of the workshop, perhaps the best option would publish a special issue in an indexed journal. The organizer I will contact with different journals on this subject to explore this possibility.